

David Page Biography

David Page is the president of Page Surveying & Associates, a 33-year-old surveying firm that was founded by his father David Page Sr., who was a very well respected professional land surveyor in the State of Oklahoma. David Jr. began his surveying career at a young age working alongside his father using conventional surveying equipment and methods to retrace the footsteps of the previous surveyors who came before them. His father had a love and a passion for surveying and instilled those professional qualities in his son. Today David Page Jr. takes the utmost pride in upholding the legacy of integrity and honesty that his father taught him from an early age.

In 1993, David graduated with honors from Oklahoma State University with a Bachelor of Science degree, where he majored in agricultural business. Upon graduation David returned back to the family business to help his father meet the growing needs of the company and to work towards obtaining a surveying license of his own. David continued practicing under the guidance of his father until he became licensed himself in April of 2003. Tragically, a few short months later his father was diagnosed with terminal cancer and David would have to assume the responsibility of continuing his father's legacy.

Since becoming president of Page Surveying, David has taken his father's vision and grown it exponentially, specializing in large commercial boundary surveys, extensive topographic surveys for large commercial developments and major high-rise construction projects totaling over a billion dollars. Because of his love for surveying he has been passionate about mentoring young surveyors by providing apprenticeship opportunities as well as conducting educational workshops at local schools. Page has also donated his time and expertise to numerous community and school projects where surveying was needed.
